The Maiden's Prayer.

She rose from her delicious sleep, And put away her soft brown hair, And in a tone as low and deep As love's first whisper, breathed a prayer. Her snow white hands together pressed Her blue eyes sheltered in the lid, The folded linen on her breast Just swelling with the charms it hid.

And from her long and flowing dress, Escaped a bare and snowy foot. Whose steps upon the earth did press, Like a new snowflake white and mute.

Like a young spirit fresh from heaven, she lowed that slight and matchless form And humbly prayed to be forgiven.

O. God! if souls unsoiled as these, Needdaily mercy from thy throne, If she upon her bended knees, Our holiest and our purest one; She with a face so clear and bright, We deem her some stray child of light! If she with those soit eyes in tears, Day after day, in her young years,

Must kneel and pray for grace from thee, What far, far deceper need have wet. How hardly if she win not beaven. Will-our wild errors be forgiven?
